Hi again,

I know it's only been a day, but hopefully, you started the homework I gave you.

If you don't know what I'm talking about, go back to the previous email I sent.

If you have, let's continue!

Once you've done your personal assessment, you're ready for the next step that I took.

Research!

I researched all different types of businesses to make an informed decision. I spent months pouring over different businesses and relying on years of previous experience.

After reviewing each business model, I reviewed my personal assessment to see which business model fit my personality, strengths, passions, and goals the best.

Then, once I landed on a business model, I researched the best courses on the market to learn it.

It's the fastest way to success other than personal mentorship, but that can be pretty expensive because most successful people are too busy to teach people 1-on-1.

But if you can get that, there's no faster way to success.

That was my process!

It took some time and introspection, but it was all worth it.

I know the process isn't perfect, and you might not hit the nail on the head the first time you pick a business, but that's okay.

At least you've done the homework to narrow your options before wasting precious resources and years of your life jumping from business to business like I did.

I truly believe that anyone interested in starting a business would have more success and achieve it faster with a business model that catered to their personality, passions, strengths, and goals.

Coupled with the right education, you'd be unstoppable.

So here's the thing: I'm taking all my research and making it available to you.

I've created Unwage Academy, where I've compiled all the remote businesses I've researched and recommended courses to learn from proven experts.

I also include vetted software recommendations and personal business courses that I created, condensing all the lessons learned throughout my journey.

Feel free to join. It's currently open to everyone, but it won't be forever.

I hope this was helpful and look forward to seeing you inside!

Cheers,
Steven
